

Coach T.'s Overview:

I have always been asked this same question, “why do we need to study history, why is to know the past important to me?” Many individuals with that sort of attitude towards history will say that it promotes nothing more than pure memorization on the part of the student. I am not going to say that there are not teachers out there that focus too heavily on the factual aspect of history, which is an unfortunate thing since the subject offers so much more beauty. Of course, studying past people, events and facts is one facet of historical study but not the sole one. If students can better understand the past then it will ultimately help them in becoming better citizens. Being able to appreciate different people and societies will allow the students to see the world with a more of an open mind and heart consequently preventing them from possible narrow minded thinking that unfortunately plagues way too many people today. History can also provide the person with a true identity and moral understanding. Who am I and where did I and my family come from? These are all questions that history can easily answer. Studying historical documents and writings can also facilitate the student in developing certain skills such as assessing diverse sources of information, reading, writing, and interpreting various forms of historical data. The list of history’s importance can be a long one but in the end we, I, would like the subject to provide students with the opportunity to enjoy storytelling at its best, enhance their critical thinking and allow them to develop into the best human beings they can possibly become since they can understand why the world is the way it is today... because of its past history!

As the course guide states, this PRE-AP American History course is designed for students with a high academic interest and strong work ethic. This course obviously is also geared to prepare students for future AP classes and tests. With this in mind, while acquiring the background knowledge of the history of the U.S. from colonization through Reconstruction, students in the PRE-AP course will be expected to be able to organize this knowledge in various note formats, be able to analyze many historical documents and become proficient in the writing processes of SAQ’s, DBQ’S and LEQ’s.

Pre-AP: (taken from: <https://pre-ap.collegeboard.org/about/overview>)

Pre-AP is about achieving results for all students. Here’s how the program is designed to accomplish that.

- Engaging resources meet students where they are.
- Meaningful feedback shows teachers where each student needs additional support and focus.
- Effective practice helps every student to build, strengthen, and master content knowledge and skills.
- Flexibility in instructional resources honors the skill and authority of teachers.
- Challenging coursework emphasizes key literacy, quantitative, and analysis skills across all five disciplines and reinforces these skills in multiple classroom experiences.
- Open access—a program requirement—means that Pre-AP courses and their high-quality instruction and assessments will serve all students.

Pre-AP American History is a writing intensive course that is designed for students with a high academic interest and strong work ethic. This course addresses the College and Career Readiness standards by implementing strategies which develop the skills, habits of mind, and concepts needed for higher level thinking and to prepare students for Advanced Placement courses in high school. Students study the history of the United States from colonization through Reconstruction. Students analyze political, economic, religious and social events and issues related to the colonial and revolutionary eras, the creation and ratification of the U.S. Constitution, the challenges of the early Republic, the Age of Jackson, westward expansion, sectionalism, Civil War and Reconstruction. Students examine the physical characteristics of the U.S. and their impact on how and where Americans lived, the American beliefs and principles reflected in historical documents such as the U.S. Constitution, the effects of major Supreme Court cases and major reform movements of the 19th century and examine the rights and responsibilities of citizens of the United States as well as the importance of effective leadership in a constitutional republic. Students evaluate the impact of science and technology on the development of the U.S. A wide variety of primary and secondary source materials is used to teach the strands of knowledge and skills listed in the TEKS through independent reading, analytical writing and in-depth discussions. Students may choose to independently complete a history fair project and to participate in the history fair competition.
